Is your child suffering from tics and ADHD?

If you have a child aged 10-17 who is bothered by tics and ADHD symptoms, we may be able to help.

The Massachusetts General Hospital is conducting a no-cost clinical trial with children (ages 10 to 17 years) who are both bothered by tics and are suffering from ADHD.

Children who are eligible for the study will receive a diagnostic evaluation and either a standard or modified course of comprehensive behavioral intervention for tics at no cost.
